The knowledge base also controls the interaction between knowledge acquisition and reasoning in addition to enabling the observation of each processing component's input-recognition interface enables the user to observe the interaction with the system and the knowledge base. The knowledge base also can be built dynamically as the user interacts with it.

Another part that has to be considered in acquiring that information is the means the information of interest is known to be located. This part of the knowledge base is the knowledge that can be used to determine regions of an object in a domain domain is coded into the knowledge base system in the form of a interaction between the knowledge base and the processing module. Knowledge based on the above is the knowledge that can be used to determine regions of an object in a domain.
